Hence why I told the other member “never mind” but they demanded answers which I respectfully gave to them.

Had no idea who the other member was. I simply responded to the post that read ‘I’m Irish’.

PS: I actually assumed the other member was a dude at uni.

No. You shouldn't have said it in the first place. They have a right to know why you're making such an odd comment in a debate thread.

Your comment threw me off, I was hoping you didn't mean it in a strange way hence I asked for you to clarify.

I think this will escalate beyond this and get into a back and forth.

Best to end it here. It was a compliment, don't draw the wrong conclusions.

Wait you were referring to women? Bro 😭
Calling a woman "bird" is not a compliment
And why are you saying it to a teen girl?

I fail to understand why you need to give a "compliment" about Irish women to a teen girl, then get mad that people are drawing the wrong conclusions.

Alright, I understand.

PS: This is one of those situations where I have to stick to the same response and platitude “Alright. i understand”.

On a different thread, I’d be happy to engage in an intellectual tug of war.

How easy it is for these threads to get derailed when someone misinterprets then overreacts to one oblique comment.

You could argue forever but the fact remains that it's not relevant to Charlie Kirk's death, and that's it's clearly not appropriate to say that to a teen girl.

@Wired_1800 derailed the thread with his post. It's not an overreaction to criticise someone for saying what he did to a teen girl.

I agree, which was why I had responded earlier with “never mind”, but then they demanded a response before others tried to pile on, but I was not bothered.

I did not derail the thread. I eneded it with “never mind”.

You chose to overreact on behalf of another individual.

I "demanded" the response in the hope that you weren't objectifying Irish women out of the blue and that I misinterpreted it, sadly I didn't misinterpret it though.

I am glad she "overreacted" on my behalf because this is an interaction that made me, as a minor, pretty uncomfortable.

Yes, I agree.

It was a silly comment that was quickly shut down by myself but others seemed to want something to engage in.

I think you need to revise your attitudes, particularly with regards to 17-year-old girls.
